Malagarie was rushed to the hospital and diagnosed with a stroke after a blood clot had lodged in his left middle cerebral artery. O'Keefe said the family believes without a doubt that the vaccine caused the stroke.

"He's a young, healthy 43-year-old, and I immediately thought it, and I said be sure to tell the doctors he took that J & J vaccine and that, to me, is what caused his stroke," she told WSAZ.

O'Keefe said her nephew's only health issue before the vaccine was high blood pressure, which was controlled with medication. One week after receiving the vaccine Malagarie remains hospitalized at Ochsner's Medical Center in New Orleans and is in critical, but stable condition.

"He can't talk now and he can't walk. He's paralyzed on the right side. He knows who we are and he will just cry when he sees us," O'Keefe said.

Doctors don't know Malagarie's prognosis for recovery yet but said it will likely take at least a year of rehab after he leaves the hospital, the local TV station said.

On Tuesday, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) paused J&J's vaccine after rare blood clots were reported in those recently vaccinated.

All six reported cases in the U.S. occurred among women aged 18-48 with symptoms developing six to 13 days after vaccination, according to a statement issued by the FDA and CDC.

One vaccine recipient died and her death is being investigated by the CDC, Virginia state officials said in a statement Tuesday. Another woman is in critical condition. A CDC official said two of the six patients have been discharged and three remain hospitalized.

Wednesday, J&J disclosed two more cases of blood clots — one that occurred in a 25 year-old-man who suffered a cerebral hemorrhage during a clinical trial and another case of deep-vein-thrombosis in a 59-year-old woman.

According to the CDC's Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System or VAERS, 56 reports of blood coagulation disorders from the J&J vaccine have been reported through April 8 and 795 reports from all three vaccines combined, including Pfizer and Moderna through April 8.

The CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices met Wednesday and decided to postpone a vote on whether to lift the pause on the J&J's COVID vaccine, effectively extending the pause pending further analysis of data relating to blood clots in people who received the vaccine. The committee said they would meet again in one week to 10 days to vote on whether or not to lift the pause.

CORRECTION: The number of blood coagulation disorders in the J&J vaccine as well as in all three vaccines combined has been updated as the term "heart attack" was removed from the search criteria in VAERS.

If the media couldn't use the expressions, "out of an abundance of caution," "extremely rare," and "safe and effective," the airwaves would be silent. If a passenger airline crashed and killed 300 people, there would be an international investigation and 24-7 news coverage of courthouse hearings and crying families.

It would only have to be any kind of an adverse effect for it to be pulled as relating to something as serious as death I don't think it's ever happened .. otherwise we'd be hearing about it incessantly.

Unfortunately (or maybe fortunately) pilots doesn't enjoy the same legal-immunity for people dying under their watch (due to an accident, due to carelessness, do to not being trained properly, etc.) like vaccine-makers.

I do understand why vaccine-makers were given legal-immunity, but I do believe, because they cannot be held responsible legally, they became arrogant, negligent, a multi-billion, or multi-trillion dollar profit, that industry is no longer about healthcare, it's about profit, it's about satisfying the needs and the interests of the shareholders. Their loyalty is committed to the shareholders, not to the people that supposed to be cured. I see a lot of corruption in so called "health-industry" AS A RESULT of that legal-immunity, no matter what violations those people do, they never will be prosecuted, held accountable, they won't even lose their jobs, they get paid anyway no matter what, or maybe even promoted with a bigger salary! I think, that is wrong, deadly wrong!

Shareholders already had limited liability for whatever claims were made against the corporations, and both their dividends and executive salaries already paid out by the corporation were immune from any sort of "claw back." I read somewhere that the military wanted them to have further immunity so they'd continue making vaccines to combat biological warfare, but my opinion is that if the military was concerned about future vaccine development it was because they were contemplating offensive biowarfare. There's no justification for the immunity they got in 1986, and it should be repealed. Period!

The vaccine companies omitted the animal testing phase. If they were subject to lawsuit for adverse reactions, I'm guessing they would have done their due-diligence and done some animal testing.

There really is no good reason for "vaccine" makers to getting immunity at all. Name one other industry that has no liability for damages. "Vaccines" are a scam on the public just like most drugs are. There really needs to be an overhaul on the medical practice. First do no harm has turned into first make your profit.

Not only no liability, but forced customers by the millions, just by getting on the recommended lists for childhood vaccines.

Im starting to believe that the "medical" field is the same as it always has been. I don't think they ever were supposed to be what we thought they were. Think about it, what has the medical field saved us from? What have they actually cured? We hear about these great breakthroughs thats supposed to help with whatever, and it never makes it to us...They could use crisper to cure aids, maybe some cancers but they choose vaccines..What if they put all this research and money into building a new mammogram machine instead of the same one? And it would be really great if they did some research and actually could answer a grieving family who asks why their relative died from a rare autoimmune disease, instead of "i have no idea". One more thing, Bayer(now bayer/monsanto), once was a corporation in Germany.....nazi Germany. And they actually created morphine(it could be heroin but I think it was morphine). Basically the same thing either way...And then decided to move to America for some post war reason, where they are saviors, not Nazis..

True... but because these companies are protected by the 1986 Act, the "free" gene therapy that Mr. Malagarie received will cost him in the hundreds of thousands in medical expenses, a YEAR of his life that he can NEVER get back, lost income wages, stress and strain on his family to care for him, and no recourse to be financially, emotionally, or mentally compensated for this experimental drug that the government WANTS to make mandatory.

You would think the Columbia, Syracuse U, American U. & Boston U. trained journalists, would suffer fits of self-loathing after using these stock propaganda phrases right out of Orwell's "1984," but my bet is that, having been fully assimilated into the media Machine, they instead say 'it's just another stupid job,' or drug themselves into oblivion.

Good analogy. Millions fly in airplanes every year, and crashes are very rare - but a huge deal because we all think that could have been us, and flight should be safe. Well, vaccines should be safe, because this could be us.

10 ^ | v • Reply • Share ›

GrouchyMathGrad → Seabreezes1 • 11 days ago

Think about those 737 maxes that crashed. The US was just about the last country to ground those planes. Trump and Boeing were saying the planes were safe, after two crashes that had very similar problems. We've got the same corporate culture and regulatory capture with pharma, but pharma can just deny any link between the vaccines and the illnesses or deaths.

Except... when that airliner was manufactured by Boeing and certified by FAA... if we recall MAX 737 - US was the last country to ground the aircraft.

FAA and FDA certification programs seem very similar to me - relying on manufacturers internal QA reports. Biggest difference is - airline still maintains liability for defective product.

I think it's time we overhaul both processes shows you how important it is to keep the origin of COVID19 as "naturally occurring" rather than developed in a CCP Virology lab in Wuhan, China after receiving the basic virus from the NIAID chief.

Previous to 2020, my two least favourite words in the English language were "diversity" and "inclusiveness". Not because I have a philosophical problem with either of those two concepts (i don't), but I sure have a problem when the words have been weaponised politically by the far left as they have been. But now my two least favourite words are "safe" and "effective". I scream inside myself whenever they are used, since once again, they no longer convey their true meaning and if anything are now nothing more than insulting, disingenuous and derogatory terms.

Very Sad! I wish the family the best because they will not only be going through the trauma of healing from this horrible vaccine injury but also dealing with a medical community that will help them as long as they can say it wasn't the vaccine. Mr. Malagarie injury will be determined to be coincidental just like the others. The worst position for any family to experience is to have the deteriorating health of a family member explained with a question mark, or because they won't find a connection to the vaccine, they will say it was natural causes..

These doctors make me sick. I have heard personally of five adverse reactions. The Moderna one was exactly the same for two of them. 14 days after the second shot, open sores over their whole body. These drug makers need to have liability put back on them. Why are all these people putting an experimental product into their body?!?

17 ^ | v · Reply · Share ›

Charlie → Mary-Elizabeth Vent · 12 days ago

That's the question- WHY are people so trusting of an untested medical application? It's not even a vaccine. 90% of the people I know have succumbed to getting this. I feel so isolated. And I feel they will accuse me if they become very ill later on, bc I will not get this. So I will become the "healthy asymptomatic carrier" that doesn't care about others- what a load of crap.

Sooo many medical doctors haven't any morals. Not to sound like a broken record but everything is so horrifying. Meanwhile I have more than enough neighbors (maybe about 6 so far) that, when I see them outside are so excited to talk about getting the 'vaccine! Yeah, I have an appointment in one hour...' One neighbor, about two weeks ago just got a shingles vaccine and felt under the weather for one or two days and now this same neighbor just went and got the Covid poison. Now this man and his wife are both fully vaccinated. I'm concerned they won't be around within 10 years time. Every time I know someone who tells me they are heading out to get their shot it truly puts a knot in my stomach. I don't know what to say to them....are they waiting to hear 'good for you!' I'm just left dumbfounded.

Yep. Heard about this yesterday. The poor guy was at his desk not more than an hour after the jab and suddenly his body was paralyzed on the right side and he couldn't speak, then collapsed. Now his poor wife and family are trying to get funds to help pay the bills. Now would be a good time for the freakin' companies to step up and help these poor folk...but what's going to happen? Nothing. They are on their own to fend for themselves....all for the sake of what???? Not to catch a virus that 99% of the population survive?????

I wrote here a few weeks ago of my own mother's experience with the vaccine. She too has a history of high BP but otherwise was in great health. She suffered a stroke after taking her second dose of Covishield. Whilst she's out of hospital now she's struggling to talk, cannot finish a sentence, has only about 30% cognitive skills, cannot walk and has no quality of life. From one day to another I've lost that vibrant and full-of-life woman. The road to recovery ahead is gonna be long and hard. All this for an experimental vaccine. Yet some of my family members are still eager to get their shots. Lord have mercy!
